

America's Most Romantic Restaurants

Joel Finemar

U.S. News Travel set out to find America's most romantic restaurants. As every couple is unique, each one asks for something different from their date spots. Romance never takes a common form. When it edges toward universality, cute turns to cliché in a heartbeat. Whether you want to be entertained, indulged, or awed, there's an eatery for you on this list. Despite the breadth of the search, three key romantic elements were always considered:

- Ambience = You should feel love in the air.
- View = In case the date isn't going too well.
- Food = After all, you are there to eat.

Romance may not be a science, but did someone call the love doctor? Okay, don't pull that one out of your hat, but seriously, take our advice: These seven restaurants are sure bets for romantic evenings.

Recommend for: The "Hip" Couple

Many people enjoy being "in the know" when it comes to dining at the hot spot of the moment. But no one hopes his or her relationship is as fleeting as seasonal trends. To achieve a balance of contemporary glamour and classic style, head to Eos at the Viceroy Miami hotel. The interior décor features sharp geometric shapes and bold colors. And despite its atypical appearance, Eos maintains the high level of service and sophistication that you've come to expect at elite restaurants. The Mediterranean menu offers favorites like Caprese Salad and Linguine á la Catalan. However, the patio is what earned Eos a place on this list. Perched 15 stories above ground, patio diners breathe fresh ocean air and have a glorious view of the water. Here, you definitely want to share in the sights, sounds, and people-watching with someone special.
